Our students have been diligently working on their Black History Projects during start time! Ms. Giuliana's class explored the inspiring stories of historic Black athletes like Jackie Robinson, Althea Gibson, Bill Russell, and Gabby Douglas. The students were highly engaged and thrilled to learn about these remarkable figures! They are currently designing their own jerseys as part of the project! This project not only educates them about important historical figures but also instills a sense of pride and inspiration as they reflect on the courage and determination required to break barriers and achieve greatness.

Students in each classroom marked World Read Aloud Day in unique ways. In Ms. Camryn's class, they listened to a story titled "Ten Beautiful Things," which delved into the distinction between external beauty and genuine beauty within. This book inspired meaningful discussions about valuing the small things we frequently overlook in our daily lives. After enjoying the story, her fourth-grade readers and writers collaborated to create their own lists of beautiful things.

Liz's Pre-K class delved into the lively realm of artist Alma Thomas, renowned for her lively and colorful abstract paintings. The beauty of her artwork inspired our young learners to create their own masterpieces! Ms. Liz's little artists had a fantastic time expressing themselves and experimenting with colors, just like Alma Thomas. The project encouraged the children to embrace their individuality and explore the endless possibilities of art. Through this engaging activity, they learned about the power of self-expression and the joy of creating something unique.

Last weekend, the Jepson Staff had a booth at the School Choice Magnet Fair! We were thrilled to engage with numerous prospective families for the 2025-2026 school year. If you know anyone who might be interested in joining our school, please contact Ms. Barbara so she can connect with them. We had informative discussions about our diverse curriculum, extracurricular activities, and the supportive community we foster. The fair provided an excellent platform for us to highlight the unique aspects of our school that make it a special place for students to learn and grow. We look forward to welcoming new families and sharing in the vibrant educational journey that Jepson School has to offer!
